women, but in recent times, there have been complaints that such dedicated women also indulge in prostitution to sustain themselves.

(c) and (d) The customary practice of dedication has been the phenomenon of poverty particularly among the Scheduled Castes and backward classes to some extent. Lack of literacy and of control or access over productive resource (economic) has enfeebled such families and they continue to dedicate girls.

(e) The State Governments of Andhra Pradesh, Karnataka and Maharashtra have enacted laws for the prohibition of Devdasi system. The commercial aspect of this practice attracts provisions of the Immoral Traffic (Prevention) Act, 1956. This supplements the substantive laws against Kidnapping, sale, abduction and wrongful detention of women and girls. Besides, these State Governments have initiated various economic rehabilitation measures.
