News report on purchase of dubious Artefacts

3742. DR. MOHAN BABU: Will the Minister of HUMAN RESOURCE DEVELOPMENT be pleased to state:

(a) whether Government's attention has been drawn to the news item appearing in the "Indian Express" dated

15th March, 1997, captioned, "Dubious artefacts worth crores find way into National Museum";

(b) if so, the reaction of Government thereto; and

(c) the steps proposed to get the artefacts examined in the museum laboratory at an early date?

THE MINISTER OF HUMAN RESOURCE DEVELOPMENT (SHRI S. R. BOMMAI):

(a) Yes, Sir.

(b) In this news item, a number of allegations have been made against the National Museum regarding the purchase of art objects. The National Museum acquires art objects for its collection only on the recommendations of Art Acquisition Committee, duly constituted by Department of Culture, Ministry of Human Resource Development, consisting of eminent experts of national and international repute in the field of art and culture.

(c) The National Museum has a fully equipped conservation laboratory with expert conservators and scientists of national and international repute. While acquiring the art objects, the scientific examination is always conducted by them and on their recommendation regarding the genuineness of the art objects, they are acquired.

Besides, after the acquisition, a detailed study of the art objects is always being done by the Curators of the National Museum. Most of them are experts in their own field. They also take the help from various scholars visiting the Museum or locally available in studying these objects academically and historically. Further, there is a provision in the purchase procedure that if anything is found wrong in any of the objects within three years of purchase, the same is returnable to the sellers/dealers and the money paid, if any, is recovered from them. An agreement to this effect is invariably made with the sellers/dealers when their art objects are purchased. While resorting to the procedure, a Committee of experts examines the art objects in question for the purpose.
