(a) the policy on the use of Armed Forces for internal security on permanent basis;

(c) the structure for command and control of Armed Forces when deployed for internal security?

THE MINISTER OF HOME AFFAIRS (SHRI INDRAJIT GUPTA): (a) The constitution of India lays down that "It shall be the duty of the Union to protect every state against external aggression and internal disturbance and to ensure that the Govt, of every State is carried on in accordance with the provisions of the Constitution." The Armed Forces are called upon by the Union Govt, to restore normalcy in any State if any group expresses secessionist aims and/or is responsible for creating a situation of internal disturbance beyond the capacity of the State Govt, to contain such a situation. This is sometimes preceded by declaration of such a State as disturbed area and declaration of the group as an unlawful organisation. The Armed Forces when so called upon enjoy special powers of search and arrest in the event of the State concerned having been declared as disturbed area. The Govt, are not in favour of deployment of armed forces on permanent basis; as soon as any situation which necessitates the deployment of armed forces for civil duties is over, the armed forces are withdrawn.

(b) The duties of preserving law & order, of protecting property and of quelling disturbances rest on civil police and other civil Govt, forces. Every effort is made to maintain the civil administration as long as possible. It is only when it is perceived that the civil resources are inadequate to meet the situation, civil authority may call on the Armed Forces for assistance. The stage at which the civil forces will be reinforced by troops is decided by the local civil authorities in consultation with the Officer Commanding the Armed Forces.

(c) There is no change in the existing structure for command and control of the Armed Forces when they are deployed for internal security. They continue to function under the command structure of the Army while performing internal security duties in aid to civil authorities.
