To overcome faults in underground cables and to improve the general functioning, a number of short and long term measures are being implemented progressively in both cities. They are—

(i) Improved construction practices and acceptance testing of underground cable during the laying.

(ii) Gas pressurisation of junction and primary cables as a preventive maintenance technique.

(iii) Use of jelly filled cables in distribution cable network to prevent ingress of moisture.

(iv) Use of cable ducts in selected congested routes so as to protect new cables from damage.

(v) Use of microwave/PCM media for local junctions to improve reliability and availability.

To improve the functioning of the internal exchange plant in Calcutta network, apart from normal preventive and corrective maintenance measures, a concerted action has been taken to replace the most affected worn out parts in stronger automatic exchanges. In Pentaconta crossbar exchanges an upgradation programme has just been completed to improve the working in both cities.
