Safety Organisations set up on the Railways have been engaged in inculcating safety consciousness amongst the staff connected with the running of trains and in ensuring that the staff do not violate safety rules or indulge in short cut methods. Through inquiries are held into all accidents and appropriate remedial measures are taken to prevent recurrence of similar accidents. Technological improvements in "the shape of improved signalling and interlocking track circuiting, etc. have also been made to the extent feasible. (b) The Petroleum Information Service which was set up in June, 1961, was functioning as an organisation providing information on matters concerning petroleum and allied subjects, and also published a Journal called 'Oil Commentary'. The oil industry in India does not bring out any journal which could provide a forum for publication of information about the current developments and advances in the field of Petroleum, its downstream utilisation etc. In view of the increasing importance of the India Oil Industry, it was considered necessary that Oil Commentary should be developed to a level where it can fulfil that role. This in turn called for the strengthening of the Petroleum Information Service so that the publications could have a proper back-up of an information source. The Petroleum Information Service was, therefore re-organised as the Bureau of Petroleum and Chemicals Studies which would cover the entire petroleum field from exploration, production and transportation of crude oil and natural gas to all downstream operations as well as energy economics. The Board of Management would consist of Chief Executives of nine Public Sector Undertaking in the field of petroleum, petrochemicals and fertilizers.
