

the truly wonderful and unique way in which the people there had stood behind him and supported these values. We are no less lull of sorrow and grave concern and even agony at what is happening in East Bengal but I can only appeal to the hon. Members that this is not the moment when the Government can say anything more. Whatever the government may or may not be able to do, it would not be wise for them to become a matter for public debate. I do not think that hon. Members expect us to give replies to the various questions were asked. I think the purpose of this discussion was more for us to know their minds and hear their suggestions. As hon. Members know, I held a Meeting this morning with the Leaders of the Opposition parties which practice I hope to continue. We are as closely in touch with the happenings in East Bengal as is possible in the present situation. I hope to keep closely in touch with the Leaders of the Opposition as well as other Members who would like to come and meet me so that we can know their mind. We cannot always, I must admit, give our mind but we will certainly tell them as much as is possible to do.
