(a) whether it is a fact that even if the total installed capacity for production of tractors is exploited fully, there will be a shortage of nearly 35,000 tractors yearly;

urers are being encouraged to expand their installed capacity. With a view to fostering rapid development of the industry, this industry has also been exempted from the licensing provisions of the Industries (Development and Regulation) Act, 1951 with effect from the 7th February, 1968. Following delicensing of the industry, one scheme for the manufacture of Russian DT 14B tractors has been approved in principle. A number of other proposals for the establishment of new units in the field are being processed. The implementation of the schemes which may be approved eventually will take time. It is, therefore, difficult to indicate at this stage the time by which the gap between the demand and supply from indigenous production will be made up. In the meantime, in order that the progress of agricultural production is not hampered, imports of tractors to some extent are being allowed.
