

ment is Rs. 90,55,743 and the value of another supply under negotiation is Rs. 45 lakhs. It may be mentioned that the participating firms do not always disclose their trade to officials in the Pavilion for obvious business reasons. No orders are directly booked by Government officials. Trade enquiries being received by the officers are communicated to the suppliers in India and these enquiries, some of which get concluded in contracts run into large value.

(b) All kinds of manufactured goods such as mill-made textiles, handloom textiles, khadi textiles, handicrafts, jewellery, cigarettes, soaps, etc. Besides 84 serious trade enquiries for the supply of engineering goods, 20 for mill-made cotton textiles, 10 for silk rayon, 2 for woollen textiles, 2 for khadi textiles, 13 for manufactured jute, 13 for miscellaneous manufactured goods such as plastics and plastic products, 5 for leather goods, 5 for mica, 22 for processed food such as tea, cashew, canned food, 6 for spices, 3 for manufactured tobacco, etc. are now under active negotiations between the Indian manufacturers or exporters and buyers abroad.

(c) The business firms do not usually report to Government when they finalise their business deals. Government usually gather information only from the Customs at the exporting ports wherefrom export takes place.

(d) It will depend upon the terms of each contract between the seller and the buyer. It is, therefore, difficult to give a definite time in regard to the shipment of the goods.
