SHRI ANAND CHAND (Himachal Pradesh): Mr. Chairman, I was saying the other day that in spite of eight years of planning behind us, so far as foodgrains are concerned, prices are still rising and we are looking to the vagaries of the weather as to what is going to be our fate in that particular field. In clothing, as I was submitting the other day, the President himself has been pleased to say, "some industries, notably textile, have suffered a set back". Looking into the figures, I find that whereas production in 1957 was about 53 lakh yards, in 1958, for the first nine months, it amounted only to 43 lakh yards. Coming to shelter, for the period 1956—59, the State budgets were only to the tune of Rs. 35 crores. I submit that this is a very meagre figure when we look not only at the lakhs of homeless people that are there in the big cities sleeping on pavements but also the vast slum areas that are a common feature of our industrial cities. With regard to health, in 1957, the mortality rate was 12 per thousand which is, again, amongst one of the highest mortality rates in the world. Coming to education, I find that the percentage of literacy in 1951 was not more than 18. In a democracy which we are slowly and steadily building up, where the people have to elect their representatives, where the Government has to be by the people and for the people it is really disheartening that in spite of efforts literacy in this country has not increased at the rate that it should. If we look to the other countries of Asia, say China for instance, we find that they have been able to wipe out illiteracy in a very short period but here, after eleven years of independence we still have the figure of 18 per cent. Perhaps this has been increased by 2 or 3 per cent., making a total of 21 per cent. But even this, 21 per cent. for a population of 40 crores, is not a picture of which any Government can be proud.

After briefly touching these points, I would like to make mention about the Union Territories. I have been keenly disappointed that there is no mention about us in the President's Address. Perhaps the reason is that, barring Delhi, the population of the Union Territories is not more than thirty lakhs or perhaps the other reason is that nothing of note has happened therein. Well, Sir, I cannot deny that ours are the forgotten areas of India. Away from the hubbub of life, very little attention is paid to them and their problems howsoever difficult, have not, to my mind, received the sympathy and support which are their due. In this august House, I have been saying off and on that in view of the fact that there are no legislatures in those areas, a much larger time must be given and a much larger interest must be taken in their affairs. Especially in Himachal Pradesh, which barring Delhi is the largest of the Union Territories both in size as well as in population, there are problems which, it is high time I think, should be tackled and tackled expeditiously. As you are aware, Sir, and as the House is aware, after the States Reorganisation Act of 1956, Himachal Pradesh was relegated to a Union Territory and the Legislature which was there was withdrawn and now, for the last two years, the experiment of the Territorial Council in the territorial field, and I should say the advisory committees experiment, at the State level is being tried. So far as the Territorial Council is concerned, there is no doubt in my mind, as there is no doubt in the minds of the Members of that body itself, that they have not been able to achieve anything significant and it is a measure of their helplessness in this regard
