STATEMENT Report of the Ghosh-Chandrakant Committee and steps taken to implement it

Part (a) —

The main features of the Report are as follows: —

(a) In view of the limited resources available and the acute shortage felt in respect of well-qualified and experienced staff, any attempt to establish a large number of technical institutions as recommended by the Engineering Personnel Committee is fraught with serious difficulties. As such, every effort should be made to expand the training capacity of the existing institutions, wherever the conditions were satisfactory and new institutions should only be established, if found necessary.

(b) The training capacity of 19 existing engineering colleges and 50 politechnics should be expanded immediately so as to obtain 2538 additional seats for the degree courses and 4888 additional seats for the diploma courses.

(c) Three new engineering colleges and 23 polytechnics should be established in addition to those technical institutions which are already included in the Second Five Year Plan. The new institutions will give 520 additional seats for degree courses and 4020 additional seats for diploma courses.

(d) A programme of Training Teachers for technical institutions should be initiated and developed so as to ensure the availability of proper staff for the expansion of technical education. The terms and- conditions of service of the staff of technical institutions should also be improved.

Part (b) —

The Central Government have approved the scheme of expansion of the training capacity of existing institutions and the scheme is in the course of implementation. As regards the establishment of new institutions as recommended by the Committee, the matter is being examined with a view to bringing about equal opportunities for technical education in the different regions and also determining the number of additional institutions required for meeting the requirements for technical personnel for the third and subsequent Five Year Plans.

A detailed scheme is being prepared for the training of teachers for technical institutions.]
