

way in another 9 districts. Most of Tamil Nadu was surveyed but is in need of resurvey under the modern system. Resurvey and settlement operations have been done from time to time in Uttar Pradesh. Due to consolidation of holdings operations too, the records have been brought up-to-date in many areas. Besides, there is provision for annual scrutiny of the records in the State. Land records have been completed after conducting cadastral survey in Rajasthan. In Gujarat, a scheme for updating the records of rights was undertaken in 1972 which has already covered a large number of districts. Land records are kept up-to-date by field inspections carried out every fourth year in Punjab, Haryana and Himachal Pradesh.

Land is held under communal ownership in Meghalaya, Nagaland and Mizoram. Steps for building up records of rights after the preparation of cadastral maps are being taken in these areas. In Pondicherry and Dadra and Nagar Haveli the operations have been completed; in Tripura they are nearly complete; in Lakshadweep they are under way. Cadastral survey and settlement operations have also been under way in Goa, Daman and Diu.

The Government of Sikkim has drawn up a scheme for fresh survey and settlement operations in the State. The first stage is likely to be taken up during the current financial year.
