In a strictly constitutional sense, this Schedule is now, superfluous. The inclusion of any new language in the Schedule does not confer any benefit or advantage to it. The Government's policy, therefore, has been not to enlarge the Schedule further but to use constructive methods to preserve and develop the rich cultural and literary heritage of languages which are not included in this Schedule. Facilities for instruction through the medium of Nepali, for the study and development of Nepali literature and language, and for the use of Nepali for official purposes already exist in areas where Nepali is prevalent. The Nepali language has been recognised by the Sahitya Akademi also.
