(b) if so, what are the details thereof?

THE MINISTER OF STATE OF THE MINISTRY OF CIVIL AVIATION (SHRI RAJIV PRATAP RUDI): (a) and (b) Bilateral air service negotiations are concluded on the basis of balance of advantage and reciprocity to either side. Besides factors like tourism promotion, facilitation of commerce and trade, improving air connectivity of India with rest of the world, commercial advantage to the national carriers are taken into account before concluding such agreements.

THE MINISTER OF STATE OF THE MINISTRY OF CIVIL AVIATION (SHRI RAJIV PRATAP RUDI): (a) Yes, Sir.

(b) The system of multiple-laning of air corridors has been named EMARSSH (The Revised ATS Route Structure - Asia to Middle East/ Europe-South of the Himalayas). This was implemented on 28th November, 2002. In this system, some old air corridors have been deleted and about 20 new air corridors have been introduced. The new routes cover the entire Bay of Bengal, Landmass of India and a large portion of Arabian Sea.

(c) Yes, Sir.

(d) Indian Air Force (IAF) have not agreed to introduce new routes to link Jalalabad with Samar near Amritsar overflying Hindon and Ambala Local Flying Areas and Jabalpur to Rahimyar Khan in Pakistan overflying Jodhpur Local Flying Area of IAF. Therefore, the new routes have been re-aligned within the civil airspace.
